JOIN IN WORK OF CREATOR, PASTOR URGES

Rev. Dwight Putman Emphasizes Need Of Closer Relation With God.

BRIGHT FUTURE IS PREDICTED

"Either we put out into the deep in life, surmount its hard and difficult places, attain to a relationship toward the universe that is that of a conqueror, which, in partnership with the Creator, we can mould according to His will and also according to our own if ours be His, or we stay in the shallows, beaten and punned about by its waves, with souls narrowed and beaten down to earth and deploring the day that we were born," said the Rev. Dwight F. Putman, pastor of the Christ Lutheran church, Sunday morning.

The subject of the sermon was "Can We Have An Enthusiasm For Living In This Age?" the text of which was Luke 5:4, "Put out into the deep."

Speaking on the character of the times, the pastor said: "Only briefly can we say that we are witnessing an age of untold power and speed. We may be thinking of man's increased knowledge and control of the forces and laws of the physical universe or their employment in great projects. Man plans mighty tunnels, generates millions of horsepower of electricity, overcomes much in nature. It is surely an age of speed and power when a mishap means a smashup. We witnessed the war, then a period of depression following. After a brief (Continued on Page-Two)

RECORD CROWD ATTENDS FAIR; RECEIPTS DROP

Increased Attendance Over Last Year At South Mountain Fair.

OFFICIALS ARE WELL PLEASED

Four hundred and forty-six more persons attended the 1932 South Mountain fair than were present at the five-day exposition in 1931, but the total receipts fell short of last year's fair by $198, officials of the exposition announced this morning.

1,834 persons paid their admission into the fair grounds on Saturday, the closing day of the exposition, receipts totaling $642. This brought the grand total for the five days up to $2,634.92. The total attendance for the five days was 7,528.

In 1931 7,082 persons passed through the turnstiles during the five days with receipts totaling $2,833.

The difference in receipts this year over last, despite the increase in attendance is due to the reduction in the admission price. Last year the admission was forty cents per person and this year the admission was reduced to thirty-five cents. Had fair officials charged the regular admission price of forty cents the receipts this year would have totaled $3,011.20, an increase of $178.20 over last year.

Officials Pleased
Fair officials expressed their appreciation and thanks of the generous support accorded the exposition this year and announced that they were glad they reduced the admission fee, despite a loss to the fair association.

"We would far rather give everyone in the county an opportunity to attend the fair, at the reduced admission than to bar someone from the gate because of the forty cent admission price," one official said this morning.

Exhibitors also expressed their satisfaction with the results of the fair, declaring that more interest was shown by patrons in the many displays this year than at any previous exposition.

So far no information has been laid against the men here. Whether Sergeant Frutcher will ask that the men be held or released could not be learned.

Several local business men purchased the tablets of six sales tax forms each from the men for 35 cents each upon their alleged representation that they were from the state department of revenue. The state department does not sell sales tax forms, state police said.

MACHINE LOST IN SUNDAY MISHAP

Sweet potatoes, salvaged from a truck which upset and burned on the Lincoln highway, one mile east of here, Sunday morning at 11 o'clock, were sold "for a song" to numerous Gettysburgians who followed the fire company to the scene of the mishap.

Other "spuds" were gathered up by persons at the scene and taken away. The truck had a load of 324 baskets of sweet potatoes, approximately 150 bushels.

The ton and a half truck, driven by H. E. Shrieves, 20, of Keller, Virginia, went off the Lincoln highway, near the Oyler and Spangler fertilizer works, after the driver is said by a state highway motor patrolman, who investigated, to have drowsed at the wheel.

The heavily loaded machine rolled over on its side along the Western Maryland railroad tracks, and caught fire immediately. Shrieves, who suffered a lacerated right arm, was given treatment by Dr. C. G. Crist.

Before the Gettysburg fire company responded to an alarm, the truck and part of its contents were destroyed.

The truck, valued at $1,500, was a total loss, the patrolman said. Shrieves was taking the load of sweet potatoes from the Eastern Shore to Johnstown.

JURY DRAWN IN TRIAL OF DAVIS

U. S. Senator Engages Seven Attorneys And Assistants To Fight Charge.

New York, Sept. 19 (AP)—A jury was selected in one hour and fifty-five minutes this morning for the trial of Senator James J. Davis, of Pennsylvania, who is under indictment for allegedly violating the federal lottery law in connection with activities of the Loyal Order of Moose which he heads.

Senator Davis was indicted with six others a month ago. Last week he obtained a severance so that he might be tried before the November election in which he seeks reelection.

Conviction on all the counts against Davis would provide a maximum possible penalty of 20 years in prison and fines of $28,000.

Senator Davis sat in the midst of seven attorneys and their assistants and listened intently while Judge Frank C. Coleman reviewed the charges against him.

"These alleged lotteries were ostensibly or actually for benevolent purposes in fraternal orders," the court said.

Exercise Challenges The government exercised several challenges, excusing two of the talmen who were Knights of Columbus and a labor union man.

One prospective juror, Walter B. Isaacs, told the court:

"I wouldn't bring a verdict against this man—I can see no harm in it."

Members of the jury are: Herman Rieb, executive; Reuben Schlager, retired silk jobber; Nicholas J. Schery, contractor; Benjamin Cohen, wholesale millinery; Jack Levy, grocer; Christopher J. Donnelly, artist; Henry J. Moore, photographer; Joseph Kane, assistant credit manager; Andrew Blair, clerk; Gustave Lachmann, retired milliner; Sydney B. Childs, investments; and J. Renton Haney, salesman.

The alternates are Abe H. Weintraub, broker, and Charles H. Bowen, clerk.

YOUTH IS SAVED BY GOV. RITCHIE

Governor Commutes Life Sentence Of 23-year-old Herman Duker.

Baltimore, Sept. 19 (AP)—Governor Ritchie Sunday commuted the death sentence against Herman Webb Duker and remanded him to the penitentiary for life, asserting that he did not think the 23-year-old murderer "should be hanged because of anybody's prediction as to the kind of prisoner he might be."

The governor's action brought to a close nearly ten months' litigation to have set aside the penalty imposed by Judge Joseph N. Ulman, who said it was a "tragedy" to exact the life of Duker for killing a milkman in an attempted hold-up because he was a psychopath, but sentenced him to hang because he would be "a serious threat against the lives of other prisoners and of the guards" in the penitentiary.

Cries In Corner Of Cell Duker became hysterical when Warden Patrick Brady carried the news to him in the death house. He grasped the warden's hand through the bars of his cell when Mr. Brady called him to the door, sensing that the governor had made known his decision in his case.

"I'm so glad! I'm so happy! I don't know what to do!" he cried, then raised his hands to his face, walked to a corner in his cell and started to cry. The warden had intended removing him from the death house immediately, but because of his emotional condition said he would leave him there until some time today.

Duker's mother, Mrs. Herman Duker, was advised by the governor by telegram that her son's sentence had been commuted, and received the message shortly before word of the governor's action had been carried to the prisoner. She had been absent from her home during the afternoon, and the telegram was waiting for her when she returned. She had visited Duker Saturday afternoon.

Having set Tuesday as the day he will begin the fast in protest against British government plans for communal elections in India, the Mahatma has been preparing for the event for weeks. It was learned at Veroda jail at Poona, where he is held, that he has been studying ways to extend his life as long as possible after beginning the hunger strike.

He declared, however, he still hoped the situation might change and relieve him of the necessity of fulfilling his vow. The only condition on which he offered to withdraw from his plan was abandonment of the British elections scheme. Meanwhile he has started cutting down his diet of staple foods and milk and ate Sunday only sparingly and between long intervals. He was also eating less fruit and eliminated exercise in order to conserve his energy for the fasting period.

It was reported in official circles that he may be granted greater freedom in the prison when the fast begins and that usual restrictions imposed on prisoners will be withdrawn in his case. It was believed he would be allowed to held unsupervised discussions with political leaders who are anxious to help in arriving at a solution of the problem, involving representation of lower classes in the elections.

TAX PENALTIES ARE SUSPENDED

Waynesboro Borough Council Grants Sixty-day Extension Of Time.

The five per cent penalty for non-payment of Waynesboro borough taxes before October 1 was suspended for sixty days by the Waynesboro borough council. The penalty will not be added, as a result of the action, until December 1, 1932, giving Waynesboro people more of a chance to pay the net sum of their taxes.

Simultaneously, council authorized by resolution Borough Manager A. Stover Fitz to negotiate a loan of $15,000 maximum to carry on work within the borough until the balance of the 1932 tax duplicate is settled. Approximately $18,000, it was estimated, remains to be definitely collected on the current duplicate, exclusive of exonerations, etc. The resolution sets forth that of the $15,000, portions of that figure may be borrowed from the bank whenever necessary.

At the recent session of the legislature, the house passed a bill to the effect that boroughs may extend their ninety-day periods to five months for payment of taxes without penalties. Due to the economic conditions, council deemed it wise to extend the period. This applies solely to borough taxes, and not to school taxes. No action has yet been taken by the Waynesboro board of education.

Evangelist Opens Meetings Sunday, Episcopal Church

The Rev. Henry W. Stough, Jr., opened a series of meetings Sunday night at the Episcopal parish house, West High street. He spoke on "Signs and Signals of the Second Coming of Christ."

The Rev. Mr. Stough is the son of Doctor Stough who held a meeting here several years ago and who is now conducting a campaign in Philadelphia. Tonight the Rev. Mr. Stough is speaking on "The Great Physician of All" in which he will discuss the healing of the body. "The present depression, the threatening revolutions, the perplexity of nations, and the rumors of wars are all signs of the near return of our Lord," he said Sunday night in his message. "All the signs as laid down in the Bible are present today."

Police Seeking Killer Of Wife

Baltimore, Sept. 19 (AP)—Police and a posse of citizens were searching the woods at Fullerton on the eastern outskirts of this city today in search of Daniel Kirby, 49, who left this morning after fatally shooting his estranged wife, Lily.

It was only by a narrow margin that one of Mrs. Kirby's children by a former marriage, 16-year-old Mary Kitzmiller, escaped from being struck by one of the bullets as she attempted to protect her mother.

The separation of the couple occurred August 19 after she had him arrested on a disorderly conduct charge.

2 KILLED, ONE HURT IN RIOTS

Kentucky Feud Breaks Out Anew And Governor Sends Troops To Manchester.

Muskogee, Okla., Sept. 19 (AP).—A sixth death climaxed today the bloody week-end of warfare between the law and mountain crime in the eastern hill country where officers of the law sought highwaymen who killed Mrs. Susie Sharp two weeks ago.

Hert Flippin, deputy sheriff, died of wounds, evening the score of those slain—three peace officers, three accused outlaws.

Two of three alleged killers sought also for the slaying Saturday of Deputy Sheriff Webster Reece were shot to death by officers in the heart of the rugged Cookson hills. But Deputy Flippin and Andrew McGinnis, special deputy sheriff, also lost their lives.

The suspects slain were Ky Carlisle and Troy Love, described by officers as escaped convicts.

Manchester, Ky., Sept. 19 (AP).—Two men were killed, one was wounded and another man and an elderly woman narrowly escaped being shot as a feud dating back to the Civil war broke out anew in the shadows of the Clay county courthouse here.

Sunday night a detachment of twenty-five Kentucky National Guard troops patrolled the streets of this little community and authorities voiced apprehension that the trouble was not over yet.

One of the men slain was Commonwealth's Attorney Frank H. Baker, 39, of London, Ky. The other was identified at John Brockman, about 25 years old, formerly of Breathitt county, Kentucky, and of Southern Indiana. The wounded man was Frank Young, 40, who was shot in the left hip.

Shooting Keeps Up For Hours The shooting started Sunday morning and kept up intermittently for several hours. The fire, authorities said, apparently came from men barricaded in the court house.

Baker and a group of men went Saturday night to the home of Wiley Baker, 62, the prosecutor's uncle, opposite the court house. Sunday morning, one of the men in the group said, the official walked outside the house after eating breakfast and was shot down, a rifle bullet piercing his body and killing him instantly.

Lillian Leitzel's Widower Marries

Alfredo Codorna, circus aerialist whose first wife, Lillian Leitzel, was killed in a fall from a trapeze in Copenhagen in February, 1931, married his new mate, Miss Vera Bruce, in San Antonio, Texas, Sunday.

Miss Leitzel's brother, Alfred G. Pelikan, attended Gettysburg college, 1914-15, and after graduating from Carnegie Tech accepted a position in Grand Rapids, Michigan. He is now director of art in the Milwaukee public schools.

The ceremony was performed in a hotel before a large crowd of circus performers and delegates to the National convention of Circus Fans of America by District Judge R. B. Minor.

Miss Bruce, whose life work consists of being tossed about the top of the great circus tent by fellow members of her team, appeared to be shivering with stage fright as she took her place before Alfredo Codorna before an improvised altar.

"I have taken many leaps in my life," she said later, "but nothing like the one I took today. I was frightened. Why should I be? But I was a little nervous."

Nova Scotia To Lose Apple Crop

Montreal, Sept. 19 (AP).—Gales swept up from the Atlantic over the week-end leaving a trail of destruction.

Throughout eastern Canada high winds destroyed fruit orchards and disrupted communications and heavy rainfalls caused landslides.

In the Annapolis valley, Nova Scotia, the wind blew down trees and destroyed about 75 per cent of the apple crop.

Orchardists of Annapolis valley estimated more than 300,000 barrels of apples had been stripped from their trees, involving a loss of about one million dollars.

McSHERRYSTOWN BOY HIT BY AUTOMOBILE

He was accidentally struck by an auto driven by E. Bollinger, Hanover. The boy was taken to the office of Dr. H. F. Goeken, where his injuries were dressed. He was then taken to his home, where he is recovering.

and endeavored to pass, while another sedan, driven by Ivan Carbaugh, 20, of South Mountain, Franklin county, was coming east on the highway, the patrolman said. At the hearing before Justice of the Peace Shealer, Frock testified that Miss McDevitt's car forced his truck off the highway by cutting in too close after passing. Frock said he pulled off the highway to avoid hitting the Washington woman's machine, and then in order to avoid crashing into a concrete culvert he pulled the truck back onto the highway, crashing into the front end of Carbaugh's sedan.

Man Sprains Arm
Miss McDevitt denied that she forced the truck from the highway, saying she thought she had plenty of room to pass before Carbaugh's car reached the scene.

Miss McDevitt's machine was some distance ahead of the truck when the Carbaugh sedan and truck collided, but she stopped and went back to the scene to see if she could be of any assistance.

Carbaugh suffered a sprained left arm and received treatment at the Warner hospital where the arm was x-rayed. James Daywalt, Fayetteville R. 2, one of two other occupants of Carbaugh's machine, suffered a bruised arm.

Frock, who was delivering soft drinks, escaped injury.

Damage to the truck was estimated at $200, while damage to the Carbaugh sedan was estimated at $150. Both machines had to be towed away.

Carbaugh, Frock and Robert Crone, of Cashtown, who was just ahead of Carbaugh's machine, testified at the hearing at which Miss McDevitt paid the fine and costs.

Living Interdependent
"Then, too, these are times in which living is highly interdependent. No strike or disturbance of any nature can occur anywhere in our nation without our being affected directly or indirectly. A revolution in South American sends a tremor through our country for reasons other than our investments that may be involved.

"This day of great complexity which produces personal panics in the lives of many individuals seems to them to be nothing other than a day of mental and moral uncertainty and spiritual bewilderment. In the midst of the breakup of old certainties and foundations, and the onslaught of new forces and philosophies, society appears to them to be in a state of distressing confusion. And there are none to show the way out."

The Rev. Mr. Putnam then told the story of Jesus causing the nets of Simon Peter and the fishermen on the sea of Galilee to be filled with fish by telling them to "put into the deep." That is how we should be met said the speaker.

No Defeat, No Death
Addressing the student part of the congregation the pastor stated: "Some of you the deep will hold. You will see a great day ahead. The times are ripe for you, and you will know it. The world puzzle is waiting to be solved. You are a part of it. It will enmesh you and you will forever remain a routine fisherman on the sea of Galilee, or allying yourself with strange strange powers that are abroad, and having a real enthusiasm for living, you may thrill to the joy of helping make increased value out of life for all humankind.

"For those who so live there is no defeat. There is even no death. Eternity takes on meaning, and immortality is certified for us without theological argument."

Nothing Venture by Patricia Wentworth

SYNOPSIS: Nan has taken fearful refuge in her room from her husband's cruel doubt that she is the daughter of the famous explorer, Nigel Forsyth, and from his suspicion that she accuses Robert Leonard of murderous designs upon Jervis from mercenary motives. He is brought to his senses by a packet of letters from Nan's father, and goes to her room with apologies.

Chapter 25

F. F. SCENTS A THRILL

Ferdinand Francis came down next day, arriving in time for dinner with an extraordinary assortment of luggage, including the yellow Gladstone bag, a canvas hold-all, a uniform-case scraped and battered down to the bare tin, a typically British wash-basin with a leather top, and some assorted parcels. All except the parcels were plastered over with labels of every shape and color.

When dinner was over, they had coffee on the terrace, with the heat dropping out of the day and a breeze blowing in from the sea. Mr. Francis' bright brown eyes looked appreciatively from his coffee to a bed of flame-colored snapdragons, from the snapdragons to Nan in a green frock, and from Nan to Jervis.

"No more accidents?"

There was a little dragging silence before Jervis said in a casual tone, "Only the old bridge above the fall."

Ferdinand jerked round in his wicker chair.

"Not really! And it fell?"

"What a dramatic mind you've got, F.F.! The timbers were rotten with the spray."

"Rotten were they—and with the spray?"

Jervis nodded.

"The bridge fell. And was there anyone on it when it fell?"

Jervis got up and stood half turned away, looking down towards the ravine.

"Nan had a narrow escape," he said. "She'll tell you about it if you want to know."

Ferdinand certainly wanted to know. He looked at Nan, and found her changing color.

"There's nothing to tell, Mr. Francis."

"Oh, I imagine there's something."

"No, there isn't." Then, as Jervis looked over his shoulder with a sardonic gleam in his eye, she colored and said stammeringly, "I ran on to the bridge. It cracked, and then it fell. Jervis pulled me up."

"My eye!" said Ferdinand. "Can't someone do better than that? Haven't you got a few extra syllables about you, Mrs. Jervis? I feel as if I could do with them if you have."

"Bran wouldn't cross it," said Nan only just above her breath. "I knew there was something wrong when Bran wouldn't cross it."

"I'm an inquisitive man," said Ferdinand, "and I'm feeling the strain of this conversation pretty badly. If someone doesn't tell me what happened soon, I'm going to be a first-aid case."

Jervis had been listening in a careless attitude, one knee on the balustrade. His sudden smile came and went again. It gave his face an extraordinary charm. He looked at Ferdinand with affection.

"Very nicely put, F.F. I'm afraid I only deal in dry facts—that's why I'm not competing. Nan will turn on some imagination for you."

Nan's cheeks burned with a sudden scarlet. Everything in her was reacting violently from the moment when she had stood with the door between herself and Jervis and had not had a word to say.

That was last night; but it might have happened in another world. She had felt drained and dumb, a sort of ghost in the dark. She did not feel in the least like that now. She wanted to convince Ferdinand to get him on her side. She felt warm, and alive, and sure. She leaned towards him with her elbow on the arm of the chair.

"I'll tell you what happened."

"That's better," said F.F.

Jervis got up and strolled away.

"When the thrills are over you can wander down to the ravine and view the remains," he said. He went down the steps and on down the grassy slope.

"Now, Mrs. Jervis," said Ferdinand.

"Jervis doesn't believe — anything."

"Well no—he wouldn't. Suppose you try me—I'm good at believing."

"There's so little to tell. There's nothing that I can prove — there's only the feeling, the frightfully strong feeling."

With Ferdinand nodded.

"As you say, you've 'got a hunch'. Well, I take a good deal of stock in hunches myself. You tell me all about this bridge business."

Nan told him about waking up in the night and looking out of her window and seeing Robert Leonard by a flash of lightning.

"And what does Jervis say to that?"

"He says I couldn't possibly have recognized him all that way off."

"Well, there's something in that."

"I saw him," insisted Nan.

"Right. Now what about the bridge?"

"Jervis took me down to see the fall, and when we came to the bridge Bran wouldn't cross it—he wouldn't go on to it at all. He knew."

Ferdinand nodded.

"I've seen an elephant do that in Burma—it just stood there and trumpeted. Go on."

"Jervis was angry with him. He tried to drag him on to the bridge—"

She stopped abruptly.

Ferdinand laughed a little.

"Keep right on," he said.

"Well, the bridge went—and I'd have gone too, only Jervis grabbed hold of me and pulled me up."

His bright brown eyes mocked her a little.

"I never did care for an expurgated edition—it puts too much strain on the imagination."

"That's all," said Nan hastily.

"Nonsense! All? And how did you come to be on the bridge?"

Bran wouldn't cross, and you knew there was something wrong, and so you went onto the bridge yourself just to see what would happen."

He had the satisfaction of seeing her cheeks burn.

"Well—that is true, isn't it?" he said.

Nan jumped up.

"You'd better go down and look at the bridge."

"If I'd got a hat on, I'd take it off to you, Mrs. Jervis," said Ferdinand.

F.F. engages in a duel of wits, tomorrow, with results that puzzle Nan and Jervis.

By Alan Gould

The accession of Ellsworth Vines to the world tennis throne emphasizes the fact that tennis is one of the first sports to uncover a successor to the championship coterie that ruled the roost for so long and included Big Bill Tilden as well as Babe Ruth, Jack Dempsey and Bob Jones.

Vines, at 20, has everything that Tilden brought into play at the age of 27 to scale the heights for the first time. The Californian, despite his earlier start, probably will not last as long. They burn out quicker when they start younger but while he is having his fling the lanky American tennis ace should duplicate Tilden's stunt of bringing the Davis cup back to the United States.

One of the chief difficulties here is that Vines has no such warring companion as Tilden had in Little Johnstone. Big Bill alone and in his prime was just about equal to the task of winning three matches, including the playing of about 75 per cent of a doubles contest.

Vines has a capable enough doubles partner in Keith Gledhill, but as long as Allison and Van Ryn can keep up their swift pace, it would be better to confine Vines to the singles.

Alike In Build

The champion has Tilden's build, his resourcefulness and "all-court" game but they are far apart in personality. Vines has none of the Tilden gestures or the flair for dramatics that marked Big Bill's activities, on and off the court.

The Californian is not given to raising his arms to high heaven when shots break badly. His shuffling, deliberate gait, quick enough when it comes to covering court, contrasts with Tilden's mincing steps and nervousness.

Big Bill was always high strung. Vines gives the appearance of being calm almost to the point of stolidness. So far as the sheer power of Vines' game is concerned, there is the testimony of Henri Cochet that the Californian hits the ball harder than any tennis player the Frenchman ever met, including Tilden.

Perhaps Henri forgets that forehead blast of Little Bill Johnston's, however. It has been a half dozen years since he was up against it.

Cochet Hardly Through

Cochet's defeat at Forest Hills, decisive though it was, should not be accepted as an indication the former ball boy of Lyons is "through." The temperamental Frenchman simply was over-powered and could not get a single "break" against the withering blast turned loose by Vines.

On another day the tables might be reversed so far as these two are concerned, even though it is reasonable to feel Vines is on the upgrade, whereas Cochet has passed his peak.

Henri, however, may well feel it more incumbent upon him than ever to get into condition for a real stand in defense of the Coupe Davis at the Roland Garros stadium next summer. That's where the musketeers of La Belle France are tough to dislodge.

MORE STUDENT TEACHERS

Weatherford, Okla. (AP)—Southwestern Oklahoma Teachers' college shows an increase in enrollment of almost 15 per cent compared with a year ago. The student body numbers 506, as against 439 for the preceding school year.

The coaching staff at Notre Dame university is one of the youngest in the country, three of them having been graduated just last year.

ARENDTSTVILLE
WINS PENNANT
IN SECOND TILT

Defeats Cashtown, 10 To 9, To Cop Adams County League Championship.

Before a capacity crowd that jammed the Arendtsville ball park to overflowing, Arendtsville won the 1932 championship of the Adams county baseball league Saturday afternoon by defeating Cashtown in a hectic game, 10-9.

Manager Carl Kane's tribe won the first game of the series a week ago, 14-12 and their victory Saturday gave them the necessary two victories to clinch the title.

Goes Route

Guy Raff went the distance for the visitors and although hit hard and often in hot water, managed to stagger through to victory. Jim Kump started for Cashtown but developed a wild streak in the second inning that forced him out, Starnier taking up the pitching burden.

Arendtsville outthit Cashtown, 16-12, every man in the apple-pickers lineup getting at least one hit with the exception of Herman.

The upper countians pushed over a pair of runs in the first on Weirman's walk, a single by T. Raff and R. Shoop's double.

Cashtown came right back and pounded Raff for six runs in the second inning. D. Kuhn and Kump led off with singles and both scored on J. Bream's long double. Carbaugh was safe when Weirman booted his grounder. Bucher fanned and W. Kuhn popped to Herman.

However, Hershey came through in the pinch with a single to right-center to drive over both runners. Mike Bream was saved when Taylor messed up his hard smash. Dale Bream came through with a screaming double to right. R. Shoop then saved Raff further embarrassment by making a diving catch of D. Kuhn's low liner.

Knot Score

Kump was forced out of the picture in the third when Arendtsville tied the count on a double, two singles, a walk and a fielder's choice.

Arendtsville took the lead by scoring a pair of runs in the fourth and held the advantage until the eighth when Cashtown took a 9-8 lead.

The game was won in the last of the eighth when with the bases filled and none out, R. Shoop grounded into a double play but allowed Taylor to scamper home with the winning marker.

LINCOLN TOMB

Hanover Woman To Participate In Ceremony Dedicating Bronze Statue.

Springfield, Ill., Sept. 19 (AP)—The city which nurtured the idea of the Grand Army of the Republic welcomed to its sixty-sixth national encampment the scant remaining platoons of its once mighty host.

At the handsome memorial, which is the tomb of the one who was "Father Abraham" to the boys of '61-'65, the annual encampment was opened with a tribute by the national commander-in-chief, Samuel P. Town, of Philadelphia, and Governor Emmerson.

Mrs. M. O. Smith, of Hanover, will participate in the ceremony dedicating the bronze memorial statue of Lincoln.

Though Dr. Benjamin Franklin Stephenson is credited with conceiving the organization in this city in 1866, the Grand Army is meeting for its first national rally here. The first G. A. R. post was established in Decatur in April of that year. A pilgrimage to Stephenson's tomb will climax the encampment Friday.

Many of the veterans were present at Sunday's ceremony. For some it was the first visit to the Lincoln shrine, recently renovated by the state of Illinois. Governor Emmerson, in his welcome to the gray-haired soldiers of the Civil war, said the "Lincoln monument has been a monument to all those who served under him."

Wreaths were placed on the emancipator's tomb by Commanding-in-chief Town and the heads of various affiliated organizations which are holding their meetings with the veterans. These include the Woman's Relief corps, the Ladies of the Grand Army of the Republic, the Sons and Daughters of Union Veterans of the Civil War, and the auxiliary of the Sons of Veterans.

Conferences and the annual banquet of the Federated Patriotic societies embracing all the groups were held Sunday and the Daughters of Veterans dedicated a Lincoln statue in the court house lawn to the memory of their fathers.

The determination of the Grand Army to carry on as long as a member remains was indicated Sunday in rivalry for the post of commander-in-chief. The three leading candidates were on the field early. They are Captain William F. Wright, of Chicago, member of the National Council of Administration; Harding I. Merrill, of Wichita, Kansas, former commander of the Kansas department, and Russell C. Martin, of Los Angeles, junior vice commander.

TY COBB, JR., A CHAMPION

Augusta, Ga. (AP)—Ty Cobb, Jr., is a champion now, but not in baseball. He has been crowned city tennis champion of 1932 for Augusta. He takes possession of the trophy which has been in play since 1924, but which must be won three years before a player can retain it permanently.

Big Potatoes Pay Big
For Carolina Farmer

Maggie, N. C. (AP)—There's something in this "big potato" business, Verlin Campbell has found.

Grocery stores catering to a select trade pay Campbell 40 a bushel more than the market price for the "baker" type—a large variety—and he is cashing in on the idea on his 1,400-acre farm.

Last year Campbell sold 400 bushels of baker potatoes to a large store in Asheville at a premium of 40 cents a bushel. The "baker," so called because of its adaptability to baking, weighs from

SEVENTY-FIVE YEARS AGO

First Train of Cars in AdamsCounty: We are gratified to learn that the excursionists over the Gettysburg Railroad Thursday, had a pleasant time. At one o'clock the President and Directors of the Hanover Branch Railroad extended to the large number of persons who had assembled in Hanover, an invitation to take seats in their cars and ride over the finished portion of the Gettysburg Railroad. All present accepted of the courteous invitation and were carried at rapid speed over as smooth a railroad, as every one acknowledged, for a distance of 2 miles, as they ever rode over. After passing across the dividing line of York and Adams counties, the cars were stopped, and the very courteous President of the Hanover Branch was called for, and in a short speech congratulated the officers of the Gettysburg Railroad company. In conclusion, he extended a cordial invitation to all present to ride over their road to the Junction.David Willis, Esq., was then called for, who responded on behalf of the Gettysburg Railroad company, thanking the Hanover Branch company for their kindness. He also dwelt upon the advantages of railroads and wished a God speed to all such projects. Loud calls were made for Wm. McSherry, Esq., President of the Littlestown Railroad company, who came forward, and offered the congratulation of their Board.During the speeches there was loud and frequent applause. The guests then took their seats in the cars and passed over the Hanover Branch Railroad to the Junction, where they were furnished with an abundance of refreshments. After returning there near an hour they returned to Hanover, all delighted with the trip. The day not only afforded a great deal of pleasure but marked the entering of the first

WHITE MICE

Though Janet thinks them very niceHer mother has dread of mice,
Of brown, or white as snow.She does not like to hear them sneak,Or watch them racing in a wheel
Which nowhere seems to go.But here they are with beady eyes
And tails just twice their bodies' size.Two pair of mice with silves coats
On which the lovely Janet dotes
And calls exceeding cute.Two pair of mice, which, if you please,Must every day have bread and cheese

And oats and fancy fruit.

Two pair of mice—precisely four—
With possibilities of more.Oh, kindly friend, we fear our child
With artfulness has you beguiled, Else why should white mice come?Your gift? She put it in your mind!
And well you knew that she'd be kind

To little creatures dumb.

But did it not occur to you That we must live with Janet, too?Rabbits and birds and dogs and miceAgainst our judgment and advice
She wheedles from her friends.And, oh, the rapture and the glee
When first she dances in to see
The creatures someone sends.But when the novelty takes wings,
Mother and I must feed the things.

E. B. Sutherland believes he set a new record when he was towed 3,000 on going.

320,133 peach trees in a week. The trees, however, were wild, and the school won a department of agricultural prize of $50 for phony peach eradication work.New York—Frequently the first

New York.—If blustering, brilliant Frank Harris lives only as the subject of Oscar Wilde's perfect bon mot ("Harris is revealed in all the best houses—once") he will not have lived purposelessly.To the end that his memory shall be clarified for posterity Hugh Kingsmill has undertaken to sift together what Harris said of himself, what others said of Harris and his own first hand impressions of the man, and to extract the truth as nearly as he can. "Frank Harris" is being written long enough after Harris' death for a candid view of the man to be in good taste, and is perhaps the first calm writing about him to have appeared.It mentions, therefore, the dozens of occasions when Harris needlessly put his own head under the hammer, as well as the triumphs of his amazing gifts. The resulting picture is that of a frustrated and sad man, who paid more than they were worth for his triumphs.

Back to the Ozarks

For the first time in a long while Harold Bell Wright has written an Ozark novel. "Ma Cinderella" is the book, and the chief character is a curious woman who bosses an Ozark neighborhood (and more) with quite astonishing efficiency.
Youth has its fling at love, there are night riders, and a good deal of what is usually called "homely philosophy."Wright's vast army of readers should be delighted to get back to the "Shepherd of the Hills" neighborhood.Their novel-reading antitheses should be equally amused by "The Fanatics," Charles Boner's first novel. It is a quite sophisticated piece about the deteriorating influence of intolerance upon a rich and rosy life, intolerance arriving in the person of a crusading preacher.Perhaps without realizing it, Bonner has transplanted the typical English vicar, country squire, tavern and life routine to Central New York—where it fits very well.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

AS A GUEST OF THE CREATOR

STREAMS of matchless beauty flowed through my heart. I hid myself away from the entire world. My desk was a great ledge of grey rock, on which had been painted the perfect colorings of the sea and sun.The Atlantic ocean was to my right. Hundreds of fishing craft were cut upon the water that was as smooth and glistening as a great expanse of crystal. My seat was the grey rock, as well—storm washed and weathered.Such incomparable coloring, in rock formation, I have never seen, and know I shall never see anything like it anywhere in the world.I was at my beloved Cove by the sea. We arrived in time to see the eclipse of the sun. A perfect day at a perfect spot—like reserved seats at a great drama.We signed our names in the famous book at the Light House. Then we took dinner at a neat home upon the hill, after which we walked out to view the sky as it burst into a brilliant sunset that was a riot of color, changing every second. Blues, greys, purples, crimson, soft pearl—then across one end of the sky, great dashes of mild and mellow hues of greyish tones, subdued and quiet, that made one think that a mighty artist in beauty was completing his masterpiece. Bold strokes of melting color that almost took one's breath away!We were loathe to leave this spectacle as it faded into a night of stars.
A part of this loveliness was seen from the top of the Light House, where the kindly Keeper of the Light had taken us. For a few brief hours, we were the guests of the Creator!People from all over the world have stood spellbound there where we stood. In the registration book names from all over the world greeted us.
Surely no other spot could be more universally owned by all lovers of the beautiful in nature.Sick souls should go to this spot to recover their equilibrium! Underneath the changing light, those mammoth rocks took upon themselves a new garment of color every moment. I thought of it all as an artist's heaven. And the song of the sea, as it whipped its power across that rocky shore, was music grander than any opera ever written.The soul of the ocean hid there at that divine spot, I am sure. How infinitesimal one human being upon that platform of piled up stone, yet how happy. I felt as though an immortal love took its abode there—all about!

Senate Choice

Gov. Richard B. Russell (above) was nominated for the United States senate in the democratic primary in Georgia. He defeated Rep. Charles R. Crisp. (Associated Press Photo)an out-of-town to the tall buildings is apt to be that their height has been largely overstated. He can see the tops of them, and so does not stand in awe of them.But lead any stranger to the center of, say, Park avenue, and let him get a view of that far sweep of crowding cars, and the chances are a feeling of terror at the impersonal hugeness of the city will sweep over him.

Success Formula

Martin Beck, the vaudeville executive, tells a trade paper his recipe for success:"Work faithfully for 12 hours a day, and don't worry. Then, in time, you may become a bigger executive and work 16 hours a day, and have all the worry."It has been said that Edward J.
Flynn of the Bronx is the only one of the political overlords of the five boroughs who has been 100 per cent of the new mayor, McKee. But it develops that there's one time when the yentlemanly "bos" doesn't relish a McKee victory—when they play golf together.A clerk in a Fifth avenue haberdashery supplies the information that the shop record for purchases of neckties is held by Jimmie Dunn, the movie actor. Dunn goes in for ties bright enough to be seen blocks away, and buys so many that he probably never gets around to wearing all of them.

Orchestra Widows

One widely broadcast explanation of the divorce cloud that passed by the Vallee family was that Rudy's various professional activities kept him away from Fay Webb so much of the time that she just couldn't stand it.This wasn't the first time that an orchestra leader's marital difficulties were explained that way.Harold Stern, another of the baton waving fraternity, is said to have given too much attention to business at one time, and not enough to his wife. The break came and a divorce was in order. But in a month or so, Stern decided he just couldn't live without his mate. He courted her again and the divorce intentions were forgotten in a third-act climax.Peggy Fears startled her friends at the casino in Central Park by appearing with a light streak through her dark locks. She was one of the first to take up this new fad. The streak comes out of a bottle, as you may have guessed.New York—Lilyan Tashman was invited to be a guest of honor at the seasonal show of a Fifth avenue style shop.She was making personal appearances at a Broadway cinema

These Wild Bills

Colonel William J. (Wild Bill)
Donovan, gallant quarterback in his Columbia university days, dashing officer with the 165th infantry in France, now one of the republican hopefuls in New York state poli-

"Wild Bill" Donovan in professional baseball some years back. The colonel sometimes has been mistaken for this other Bill by fellows he has met in sports circles."Usually people who make the mistake are disappointed to find out which Bill I am," he modestly admits.

DAMS HELP TO PROTECT FISH

Fish Seriously Threatened With Stream Levels Lowest In History.

Governor Pinchot said today that the fish commission is combating the threat of low water in two ways. It advocates the building of dams or retards on trout streams by sportsmen. It is completing a stream survey which will chart waters sufficiently drought resistant to insure food and protection for stocked fish.

Construction of dams and retards on trout streams will create ideal points of concentration for trout in periods of drought.

The stream survey, a comprehensive checkup on waters of the commonwealth, has been carried through that the adaptability of streams and lakes for maintenance of fish life may be ascertained.

From the angler's angle, what Pennsylvania needs is two weeks of steady soaking rainfall and a winter of heavy snowfall, the governor pointed out.

Never in the history of the fish commission have streams of the commonwealth been reduced to lower water levels. Underground springs, diminished in flow two years ago, have not been replenished. In many instances swamp-lands, another important source of stream supply, have dried out. Fish of all species are being forced into constantly narrowing channels in the stream beds. In the smaller mountain trout streams, extremely low water has exposed trout to their natural enemies herons, kingfishers, fish ducks, raccoon, mink, and bear.

The detrimental factor in low water is the forcing of forage fish, food fish, and the more voracious game fish into a smaller feeding territory. Game fish, bass, pickerel, and wall eyed pike, are cannibalistic by nature, and when the food supply to be found in the minnow schools and the droves of smaller food fish diminishes, they turn without hesitation to feeding upon their kind.

KANSAS CITY POSTOFFICE
ONCE ONLY A HATBAND

Kansas City (AP)—From a fisherman's hatband to a $4,500,000 building of stone and steel. That's the 80-year story of Kansas City's postoffice.

Back in the '50s Postmaster Daniel Edgerton, whose delight it was to talk with as many people as possible, thrust into his hatband the few letters that came in by stage—every week or 10 days. When a resident of the pioneer community expected a letter, he hunted up the postmaster.

Now a massive new structure has been authorized to serve Kansas City, grown to be the nation's busiest mail terminal.

ANDES VOLCANO CAUSES
AUSTRALIA FLOOD THREAT

Sydney, Australia (AP)—The great Andes eruptions which filled the upper atmospheric regions—the stratosphere—with particles of ash finer than face powder may cause floods in New South Wales and Victoria.

This ash, forming a film between Eastern Australia and the sun, has caused the coldest weather on record, and the Southern Alps of Australia are covered with an unexpected blanket of snow. If this thaws out rapidly floods are certain.

Hollywood
Sights & Sounds

By Robin Coons.

Hollywood—Students of the talkie can't help wondering how long it will be before the epic of today will cease to be tomorrow's laughing stock.

Actresses who have survived the years in pictures nearly always shudder at the mention of a possible revival of old successes. Mary Pickford felt so keenly on the subject that at one time she planned to have all those historic two-reelers of her early days destroyed at her death.

The movie albums now revealed for the amusement of today's audiences contain excerpts of ancient films which in their time were "gripping melodramas." Even some of the more spectacular and recent silent film successes now appear rather quaint.

Dietrich Films Revived.

Marlene Dietrich's Hollywood success inspired revivals of several of her early German pictures, not to her great delight, it is safe to surmise. The perennial releases of old Chaplin films probably are the only ones that do not alarm their stars. Since Chaplin became "art" his slapstick has become historically significant.

But the only player I know who was seriously daunted by a "revival" is Helen Hayes, who confided the other day that but for one such misfortune she might have come to the screen sooner than she did.

"I once played in a film called 'The Weavers of Life,' so bad it never was released," she said. "Yet when I had my first starring vehicle on the stage the owner of the film dusted it off and rented a theater across the street and started his show, billing it 'With Helen Hayes.'"

"Curiosity got the best of me, so accompanied by my leading man I attended the show one afternoon after our matinee. We sat behind a sailor who emitted frequent groans of agony. From time to time he turned his face away from the screen and hid his eyes. Then fascinated, he would look again, making the most horrible noises. Finally he could stand it no longer."

Miss Hayes agreed with him. "Whenever I thought I would like to make a picture again I remembered him—and refused!"

George Brent is in the "big time" now, yet most of his fan mail still comes from children who saw him in a wild west serial he made just before Ruth Chatterton selected him as leading man. Letters from young girls, however, are beginning to pour in.

The nicest tribute to the late Paul Bern I've heard came from an actor: "He was a gentleman!" (And if you knew how rare this actor thinks gentlemen are in Hollywood. . . .)

Hollywood—Stars who yearn to produce their own pictures might do well to consult Ken Maynard before making the plunge.

Charles Ray once took the step, deciding he would select, produce and star in vehicles on which he alone would have the final say. Ray lost the decision in the box-office fight, and after several years on the stage, now has returned to Hollywood to try to win back his old following.

Maynard was a financial success as his own producer, but the experience was one to make him swear off for good. Coming into pictures from the circus ten years ago, Ken was signed as a western star by Fox, later went to First National and at the expiration of his contract there was signed by Universal to star in his own productions.

Too Much Work
"When the contract was up I could have signed again," he says, "but I didn't want it. One trial was enough. We made plenty of money, but as far as I was concerned the extra grief wasn't worth it. Being my own producer meant possibly $200 to $300 a week more for me than I would have received on straight salary from just acting, but it wasn't enough to compensate for the constant strain of business."

"I was always busy—going from the set to a desk and checking papers, reading script from early morning till late at night, working even on my way to and from the studio. No amount of money is worth that physical strain—and certainly not two or three hundred a week."

Aside from all that, the uncertainties of production made every picture a financial risk. Westerns require outdoor locations, and the weather governs those. A bad spell or rain over a period of weeks would have swung the balance the other way, and Maynard might not have fared so well.

He's Content Now

At any rate, he is content to appear in pictures, his only other responsibility being to help in the selection of stories. When one of the ten-a-year he is doing for Tiffany now is completed, he usually skips town in his plane for a two-weeks vacation before reporting for the next thriller.

He doesn't mingle much in Hollywood.

The big horseman and cowboy emoter is matter-of-fact about his screen future.

FELT MORE TIRED IN THE MORNING THAN AT NIGHT

Farmer's wife was working too hard yet she couldn't sleep well. Stewart's New Prescription put her in fine shape.

There is something seriously wrong with the man or woman who feels tired and sluggish all the time, whose work is a burden and who lacks the vigor, energy and strength which are so necessary to one's welfare. A course of Stewart's New Prescription taken in accordance with the directions given by the Stewart man at the Peoples Drug store, Gettysburg, Pa., will quickly end such lassitude, increase one's strength and send new, vibrant energy through every nerve.

Mrs. Rebecca Uman, wife of a well-known Pennsylvania farmer learned that this was so and in two weeks' time according to her husband, who says:

"My wife works very hard helping me with the farm work but she became rather rundown here of late and the work was too much for her. She used to suffer with severe headaches, especially at night and became very nervous. No matter how tired she was she couldn't sleep soundly but would spend most of the night dreaming and would wake up in the morning feeling as tired and worn out as though she hadn't slept a wink.

"After taking Stewart's New Prescription two weeks, however, there has been a vast improvement in her condition. The headaches don't seem to worry her any more, her nerves are more quiet and best of all she can sleep soundly the whole night through and wake up feeling refreshed. She looks the picture of health now and says she feels as well as she looks."

The Stewart's man is now at the Peoples Drug store, where he is daily explaining the merits of Stewart's New Prescription to numerous local people and presenting every one with a Free Sample. His advice is free. Go see him today.—Adv.

Airship Is Bumped; Investigate Gusts

Akron, O. (AP)—"Bumps" which the U. S. S. Akron has suffered in landing operations has caused a new investigation to be made into gustiness which causes the accidents.

One study is to determine a more satisfactory type of anemometer for recording fluctuations in wind velocity.

"Gustiness studies" have been started at Akron airport, where three stations are now available for recording of wind velocity. One is a new station atop the Guggenheim Airship Institute. The others are atop the Goodyear-Zeppelin dock, and the other at the official airport weather bureau. Data collected at the three points will be coordinated.

FLORIDA GIRL BACK HOME FOR WINTER GOLF EVENTS

Jacksonville, Fla. (AP)—Back home from the summer golf tournaments, Mary Rogers has gone into training for the winter season, bent on tucking some of the women's titles under her belt.

Miss Rogers broke into prominence last winter when she played in several Florida tournaments and continued her conquest into the Carolinas during the spring and early summer.

She is practicing daily now for the Florida women's tournaments that will begin in October.

RABBITS FAIL AS GOLD POT

Exorbitant Prices Promised Rabbit Breeders Blasted
By Failures.

Instead of small fortunes, many people who hurried headlong into the rabbit business by signing the widely promoted buy-back contract and paying as much as $30 apiece for breeding stock, are now reaping genuine disappointment, officials of the Pennsylvania department of agriculture today asserted.

Since this racket is still being worked, the department repeats its warning of six months ago: Beware of agents who claim that big money can be made by raising domestic rabbits under the buy-back contract.

The Lehigh Packing company, with thousands of Pennsylvania "stockholders" has been placed in the hands of receivers with liabilities reported at $4,000,000 and assets listed as $300,000 including 10,000 live rabbits, 100,000 pounds of rabbit meat and 7000 bales of rabbit fur. The company was described in the courts as a "gigantic fraud with its books in a chaotic condition."

Close Companies
In New Jersey one company is known to have shut up shop with the hopeful contract signers standing helplessly by without a market, and the state's attorney general not long ago secured injunctions against two other companies on the grounds that their contract was a fraudulent security.

"The department's prediction that the buy-back rabbit scheme provided at best, only a small chance to make even a satisfactory return on the investment, has been amply demonstrated," said Secretary of Agriculture John A. McSparran. "Ambiguous, one-sided contracts as used by these rabbit promoters, are essentially bad; this has been so fully and convincingly proven at such a high cost to the unsuspecting citizen that contracts of this type should be forever outlawed as legal instruments."

Recognize Legitimacy
The department recognizes the legitimate rabbit business as being just as worthy of recognition and encouragement as any pure bred livestock or poultry industry and regrets that promoters have made such a costly racket of it. However recent experience should not discourage the person who has a real interest in rabbit breeding. As the department advised last spring, "By far the best plan is to buy, at nominal prices, a few well-bred rabbits from recognized breeders and start with a conservative investment of cash. The business can then grow with experience."

being formed to do honestly what some of these racketeers promised to do, the department reports, and also explains that "naturally some honest breeders will also conduct an honest selling arrangement helpful to small producers."

VERSATILE RONZANI LEADS MARQUETTE TO GRID WARS

Milwaukee, Wis. (AP)—One of the most versatile athletes in Marquette university's history will captain the Golden Avalanche eleven this fall.

Eugene "Tuffy" Ronzani, a 195-pound husky from Iron Mountain, Michigan, who also is a basketball player and javelin thrower, will lead the team from fullback.

He excels at forward passing, punts with either foot, and is equally adept at defensive play or line plugging.

Washington Highlights

By Herbert Plummer

Washington — It's something rather new in politics to have the usually cheerful and optimistic Jim Watson going around expressing anything like anxiety over republican chances in a coming election.

It's just not the Indian's nature to believe that a republican or republican policies are ever in actual danger. Others may have their doubts—and have had in the past—but not Watson. His voice always has been that of assurance, of confidence, of optimism.

Yet the other day when Senator Jim breezed into town to talk the political situation over with President Hoover, he made some observations to newspapermen that coming from him sounded a bit strange.

It wasn't that he was pessimistic or discouraged over the outlook. He let it be known that he thought there would be a republican victory in November, but there wasn't the cocksureness in his statements somehow one has come to expect from him.

Not Claiming A Landslide

"If the unemployed see opportunities for going to work before the end of the year," he said, all will be well.

"We are not out of the woods," he said at another time. "We are not claiming any landslides. . . ."

And:

"There is no overlooking the fact that republican success largely will depend on business conditions."

In discussing the question of whether the republicans will keep their hold on the senate after November, he believed it would be "a very close question."

Perhaps the reason for the seeming change in Watson at the moment may be traced to Indiana and his own battle to be reelected. Reports from there indicate he is having one of the stiffest battles of his political career to keep his seat.

Fred Van Nuys, a democrat, is running against him. Van Nuys is a former United States district attorney and a one-time law partner of former Senator Ralston of Indiana. The democrats are out to get the Watson scalp.

Losing his seat in the senate would be a hard blow for Watson. Since 1894 he has been in and out of congress.

NOW SCIENCE TELLS WHY BRAN IS SO GOOD FOR HEALTH

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN Has
"Bulk" and Vitamin B;
Also Healthful Iron

By using Kellogg's ALL-BRAN, millions of people have overcome common constipation, and the headaches, loss of appetite and energy that so frequently result.

New laboratory tests show ALL-BRAN supplies two things needed to overcome temporary and recurring constipation: "Bulk" to exercise the intestines. Vitamin B to help tone the intestinal tract.

The "bulk" in ALL-BRAN is much like that of lettuce. Within the body, it forms a soft mass. Gently it clears the intestines of wastes.

Further experiments prove ALL-BRAN provides twice as much blood-building iron as an equal amount by weight of beef liver.

Eat this delicious cereal and avoid pills and drugs. They cause artificial action, and often lead to harmful habits.

Try two tablespoonfuls of Kellogg's ALL-BRAN daily—sufficient to overcome most types of constipation. If your intestinal trouble is not relieved this way, see your doctor.

*ALL-BRAN has a delicious, nut-sweet flavor. Enjoy as a cereal with milk or cream, or use in making fluffy bran muffins, breads, omelets, etc. Recipes on the red-and-green package. Sold by all grocers. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.
